The thing that I like most about "Sam" books is the test questions at the end of every chapter. Since I discovered this feature from here on out I will not be buying any books unless Sam does not sell it or unless the company has the end of chapters problems, questions and answers.

Moncur also gives at least two complete examples in every chapter that deals with new techniques in Javascript. He tediously documents everything he does in such examples. He tediously documents everything he does in such examples.

Teach Yourself JavaScript 1.3 in 24 Hours by Michael Moncur

This was the very first book on programming I ever read, people put the whole "24 hours" thing down, but they don't literally mean 24 contiguous hours in these books. This book was at just the right level for me at the time Turned out ok for me in the end.
