Analyzing the Korowai people's famous "tree house" dwellings, their patterns of living far apart, and their practices of kinship, marriage, and childbearing and rearing, Stasch argues that the Korowai actively make relations not out of what they have in common, but out of what divides them. Society of Others, the first anthropological book about the Korowai, offers a picture of Korowai lives

This important study upsets the popular assumption that human relations in small-scale societies are based on shared experience. In a theoretically innovative account of the lives of the Korowai of West Papua, Indonesia, Rupert Stasch shows that in this society, people organize their connections to each another around otherness.

Society of Others | Ingram Academic

Society of Others, the first anthropological book about the Korowai, offers a picture of Korowai lives sharply at odds with stereotypes of "tribal" societies. Author Rupert Stasch is Associate Professor in the Department of Anthropology at University of California, San Diego.

SOCIETY OF OTHERS: Kinship and Mourning in a West Papuan ...

Stasch presents a remarkably detailed analysis of how the Korowai construct their universe of otherness spatially and temporally through concepts of geographical belonging; linguistics; kinship, marriage and childbearing; and the living, the dead, monsters and demons. Topic by topic, chapter by chapter, Stasch builds a compelling picture of Korowai culture and society that is impossible to

My earlier book, Society of Others: Kinship and Mourning in a West Papuan Place (2009), is an ethnography of relations among Korowai themselves, centered on how they make forms of otherness the central focus of social bonds. This book deals closely with topics such as landownership and residential dispersion, political egalitarianism, linguistic person reference, face-to-face bodily
